

TANSY DAVIES

CATALOGUE OF WORKS

'There's no mistaking the sensibility at work, nor the inventiveness and physicality that are so distinctive.'

THE GUARDIAN

FABER ff MUSIC

Tansy Davies (b. 1973) characterises the role of the solo saxophone in her 2004 work Iris as that of ‘a shaman, or one who walks between worlds’ and in doing so she also describes herself – a musician whose boundary crossing curiosity makes her one of the most distinctive voices in British music today. With a background as a horn player, electric guitarist and vocalist, Davies studied composition with Simon Bainbridge at the Guildhall School of Music & Drama and with Simon Holt at Royal Holloway. In 2004 Davies’s neon, a gritty collage of twisted modernist funk written for the Composers Ensemble, quickly became her calling card and continues to be performed internationally.

The recipient of a 2009 Paul Hamlyn Award, Davies has written works for numerous world-class orchestras, including Tilting (2005) for the London Symphony Orchestra and Wild Card, premiered by the BBC Symphony Orchestra at the 2010 Proms. Her music has been championed internationally by ensembles including The Israel Contemporary Players, Asko|Schönberg, and the Tokyo Symphony Orchestra and at festivals including Ultima, Présences, and the Warsaw Autumn.

Brilliantly imaginative, and often gloriously offbeat, Davies’s work has taken its inspiration from sources as diverse as the architectures of Zaha Hadid (the 2004 trumpet concerto Spiral House) and the work of Anselm Kiefer (Falling Angel). Davies’s long fascination with the music of the Troubadours finds expression in her Song of Pure Nothingness and Troubairitz, the 2010 song cycle for soprano and percussion that gave its name to a portrait disc on Nonclassical. In 2011, Davies’s anthem Christmas Eve was performed at the Festival of Nine Lessons and Carols in King’s College, Cambridge and broadcast worldwide. As With Voices and With Tears – a setting of Walt Whitman for choir, string orchestra and electronics – was nominated for a 2011 South Bank Show Sky Arts Award. Davies’s collaboration with Norwegian choreographer Ingun Bjørnsgaard and composer Rolf Wallin, Omega and the Deer, premiered at the 2011 Oslo International Dance Festival. 2012 saw the premiere of a concerto for piano and ensemble, Nature, by Huw Watkins and the BCMG under Oliver Knussen, as well as the release of ‘Spine’, an all-Davies disc on the NMC label.

Davies’s critically acclaimed first opera Between Worlds – a bold and highly individual response to the events of 9/11 to a libretto by Nick Drake – was premiered by English National Opera in 2015 in a production by Deborah Warner. It was later awarded the 2016 British Composer Award for Stage Work. Re-greening for large singing orchestra was premiered at Snape Maltings, Aldeburgh, by the National Youth Orchestra of Great Britain, who later performed the work at the 2015 BBC Proms. Forest, a concerto for four horns and orchestra, co-commissioned by the New York Philharmonic, Philharmonia Orchestra and the Warsaw Autumn Festival, was premiered in February 2017.

In 2015, Davies featured in the Evening Standard’s ‘Progress 1000’ list of the UK’s most influential people. She lives in Rochester and is an Associate Professor of Composition at the Royal Academy of Music, London.

Between Worlds

‘A fabulously inventive aural fabric: exploding shards of sound frozen in a kind of cosmic aspic... a resonant, multi-layered work.’

The London Evening Standard
(Barry Millington), 13 April 2015

‘The fact that the opera made its presence felt at all, creating something so beautiful and troubling against a backdrop of something so awful and upsetting, speaks volumes about the artistic talents of all involved.’

The Times Literary Supplement
(Guy Dammann), 17 April 2015

‘The music never shrieks at us. The desperation ruffles the surface of Davies’s music, which remains essentially meditative... a remarkable piece of work.’

The Telegraph (Ivan Hewett),
12 April 2015

‘Davies at times reaches that place of emotional embodiment that only music can capture, and wraps it in a dark yet cathartic embrace.’

The Arts Desk (Jessica Duchon),
12 April 2015

‘The psychological truth of this inexorable drama comes across with awesome power... It may be an operatic debut, but it announces Tansy Davies as the most original new voice in the game.’

The Independent (Michael Church),
12 April 2015

‘A tremendous score, intense but carefully balanced. [It] may well come to be seen as one of the crucial music-theatre pieces of its age.’

Opera (Stephen Pettitt),
June 2015

Spiral House

‘Breathtaking... a tour de force, a vast juddering monster of a piece, its unforgettable rhythmic tread and mind-blowing trumpet solos wonderfully offset in a muted Miles Davis soundalike section. An impressive orchestral debut.’

The Glasgow Herald
(Michael Tumelty), 6 March 2006

Tilting

‘A livewire impossible to pigeonhole... creating a giddy musical architecture from superimposed layers, hiccupping rhythms, melodic flute fragments, distorted echoes of troubadour songs – everything glinting in sharp, bright shapes and colours... most exhilarating.’

The Times (Geoff Brown), 16 June 2005

kingpin

'The music wheeled around at conflicting speeds, clanking, tootling and chortling away until the final "kerplunk". With Davies, contemporary music never lives in an airtight box. It's out on the street, mingling with rock without ever losing the poise that stems from the right number of notes in the right place.'

The Times (Geoff Brown), 26 April 2007

Wild Card

'Glittering... underpinned by a carnivalesque momentum: a sort of space-age Pictures at an Exhibition.'

The Times (Neil Fisher),
10 September 2010

'Brilliantly etched images...'

The Telegraph (Ivan Hewett),
9 September 2010

Re-greening

'Woodwinds kept whooshing within tendril textures suggesting time-lapse photography of a burgeoning forest... a gorgeous celebration of youth and rebirth.'

The Times (Geoff Brown), 10 August 2015

'Gem-like in the beauty of its soundworld... Sleek, shimmering micro-polyphony... enchanting.'

The Guardian (Andrew Clements),
7 August 2015

Forest

'A striking addition to that niche repertoire... the calls and riffs of the quartet thread themselves through the orchestral busyness as part of that soundworld while keeping their separateness.'

The Guardian (Andrew Clements),
22 February 2017

'Bright, supple and fleet-footed. Instead of indulging in the horn's lyrical voice, Davies keeps the quartet hard-edged and boxy, stamping the figures in close overlap. This is not polite, deferential music, but as a retort to Schumann's pine-scented Konzertstück it has grit and wit.'

The Times (Anna Picard),
27 February 2017

'Davies showed her affinity for the instrument... The soloists, stride whooping, signalling, calling, through their own sonic landscape. It was as if the composer had put her head to the ground and recreated the roars and crackles of the forest.'

The Observer (Fiona Maddocks),
27 February 2017

Residuum

'Meticulously scored and organic in its growth, this piece deserves a place in the repertoire.'

The Birmingham Post
(Christopher Morley), 8 November 2004

'Unstoppable forward motion...

A thrilling powerhouse, this self-contained, self-generating piledriver of a piece is addictive and riveting in every sense.'

Tempo (Paul Conway), October 2007

'Funky approachability...

achieving an improbable balancing act between pulsating dance music and ultra-refined urbanity.'

BBC Music Magazine (Paul Riley),
Proms Edition 2006

Iris

'Brilliantly uninhibited wind and semi-pitched percussion sonorities form blocks against the soft background of a slightly rancid string chorale. The music is entirely individual, vivid, and above all acutely "heard".'

The Independent (Stephen Walsh),
8 July 2004

'Itchy brass and still, viol-like strings... it made a restless, shining impact.'

The Guardian (Erica Jeal),
11 December 2008

Falling Angel

'There is so much colourful activity within this piece that resources seem infinite...'

Birmingham Post (Christopher Morley),
5 February 2007

'Its high energy had a dark edge... The phrase "dancing on a volcano" came to mind.'

Tempo (Paul Conway), October 2007

inside out 2

'Brilliantly imaginative... [It] generated an irresistible energy, at once playful and precipitous.'

The Guardian (Tom Service), 2 April 2003

Spine

'Yet another fascinating soundworld; a slow, twilight procession of bass flutes and clarinets, flecked by sinisterly beautiful highlights of cimbalom, harp and percussion.'

The Telegraph (Ivan Hewett),
20 June 2005

grind show

'Deliciously sleazy, its live foreground and electronic background conveying an almost visual panorama.'

The Birmingham Post
(Christopher Morley), 9 July 2008

'A welcome jolt of energy... Davies's razor-sharp musical images leave an ambiguous aftertaste, which is why they're so fascinating.'

The Telegraph (Ivan Hewett),
1 October 2007

Nature

'A bewitching piece.'

The Times (Geoff Brown), 14 May 2014

'Davies succeeded in attuning the venerable form of the piano concerto entirely to her own enjoyably idiosyncratic voice, with magical and delightfully unpredictable results.'

Tempo (Paul Conway), October 2012

'Remarkable for reconfiguring the relationship between soloist and ensemble. Oscillating between pensive and pugilistic, its textures seemed to bleed out of the solipsistic piano material, while recurring thematic worms burrowed their way under the surface, creating a powerful sense of drive.'

The Guardian (Guy Dammann),
4 December 2012

'Glistening, hyperactive solo writing and a confrontation between piano and harp, there was a real sense of a journey completed. Davies's piece seemed a model of individuality.'

The Guardian (Andrew Clements),
28 May 2012

make black white

'The viol consort has amassed a whole new repertoire in recent years, but the Dowland deconstruction of make black white is among the most impressive in its radical reimagining of the group's sound as well as its sense.'

Gramophone (Richard Whitehouse),
November 2012

Aquatic

'Another work whose ineffable contours quietly rearrange your ears.'

The Guardian (Guy Dammann),
10 April 2013

Static and This Love

'Two songs after Nick Drake – the distant eroticism of Static and the achingly plangent This Love.'

Gramophone (Richard Whitehouse),

November 2012

Troubairitz

'Angular, spare but human.'

The Times (Geoff Brown), 1 April 2011

'For all that Davies's angular melodies inform us that this is 21st-century music, these songs sound archaic and timeless, as if they're being composed on the spot.'

The Arts Desk (Graham Rickson),

8 April 2011

As With Voices and With Tears

'Arresting and mysterious in effect... While bells, birdsong and footsteps murmur in and out in electronic interjections, singers and orchestra move as separate flocks on the wing, forming and reforming in large shapes that stream across the desolate landscape of the poem. A haunting, richly textured, mesmerising requiem.'

The Observer (Stephen Pritchard),

21 November 2010
